Acclaimed TV producer to share ‘secrets of the trade’ at upcoming 2013 Urban Suburban Film Festival

Philadelphia, PA (April 17, 2013) – Kellie R. Griffin, writer and producer of the BET sitcom “Reed between the lines,” and Tyler Perry’s “House of Payne,” will conduct a two-day workshop at the 5th Annual Urban Suburban Film Festival beginning June 29th, 2013. The workshop, titled “Television Script Writing 101” will train participants in the complete scope of the script writing process, from start to finish.

The event is also especially meaningful to Griffin, who hails from the Philadelphia area. She says, “To come home and be part of the USFF is special. I love all things Philly.”

The workshop is just one of several exciting events scheduled for the upcoming Suburban Film Festival slated for June 28th-30th in Philadelphia. George Clifford Blackmon, Co-Founder & Chief Executive of the festival states, “As we continue to share in developing and promoting the Delaware Valley as a major international center for the creation and production of first rate entertainment, USFF is committed to offering outstanding opportunities to train with industry leaders like Kellie for aspiring writers from our region.”

Indeed, the goal of the workshop is to aid the participant’s goal to become reality. All are encouraged to register online via Eventbrite at:
